

Additional information for Built in Microwave Ovens

We will make reasonable endeavours to put your new appliance in place including plugging it in or return your repaired appliance to its original place. In some circumstances, where we find mains services to be unsuitable for safe disconnection and connection or where some level of remedial works are required, we reserve the right to not carry out these services. We are unable to disconnect or connect hard wired appliances, to rewire plugs, to 'customise' fittings and fixtures or to dismantle or change any furniture.

We regret that we are unable to un-install or install integrated or semi-integrated appliances, this includes appliances that have an integrated kitchen cabinet door front. We can take away your old integrated appliance for disposal providing that it has been disconnected from all mains supplies and that it is removed from its niche and has no fixings or furniture attached to it.

In circumstances where the unit cannot be accessed or removed due to the way the unit has been installed, we may be unable to provide any form of warranty repair. If this happens, we may ask for the unit to be freed by you or your kitchen installer before repairs can be carried out. If this is not possible then we will be unable to inspect and/or repair the unit.
